

MONTRÉAL WRITES. |

— LITERARY MAGAZINE —

Montréal Writes / December 31, 2018 / Poetry

‘That Lying Bastard’ by April Ford

To cremate your love
plus a nice graveside service
will cost him his life

APRIL FORD lived in the U.S. for a decade, where she taught undergraduate creative writing. She has now returned home to Montreal. Her debut novel is forthcoming spring 2020 with Inanna Publications, and her debut story collection was released by SFWP in 2015. She is the recipient of a 2016 Pushcart Prize, and her work has been featured in various journals including Grain, The Lascaux Review, and QWF Writes. She is Associate Publisher of SFK Press. www.aprilfordauthor.com

Copyright © 2018 by April Ford. All rights reserved.

Share this:

Like

One blogger likes this.

Related

'Schoolyards in Subways Cars'
by April Ford

In "Poetry"

'Dido's assertion if she had exiled Aeneas from Carthage'

by Sofie Athanasia Tsatas

In "Poetry"

'Frozen Fire' by Mayy
Elhayawi

In "Poetry"

Posted in Poetry and tagged december, literary journal, literary magazine, magazine, montreal, montreal writes, montrealwrites, poem, Poetry, words, writing. Bookmark the permalink.

1 Comment Add yours

1

Hank Thomas on January 28, 2019 at 11:16 pm

Reply

★ Like

Is it worth it?

For you?

For him?

+ Leave a Reply

Enter your comment here...

Subscribe

Enter your email address to follow this blog and receive notifications of new posts by email.

Archives

Instagram

There was an error retrieving images from Instagram. An attempt will be remade in a few minutes.

Follow us:

My Tweets

